The CDL regulations are designed to insure highway security by requiring that truck drivers and drivers of tractor trailers and buses meet minimum standards. The Act also allows the elimination of drivers that are deemed unsafe or unqualified. States such as New York are given the authority to issue Commercial Driver's Licenses, but the minimal federal government requirements should be met. Group A Combination Vehicle CDL License For those who have a Group A CDL license, you are allowed to drive any vehicle or combination of vehicles of any size. With a Group B CDL license, you are allowed to In addition, you are allowed to tow a trailer if the trailer's gross vehicle weight rating GVWR is less than 10,000 With a Group C CDL license, you may drive any vehicle designed to transport sixteen or extra passengers, including the driver, if the GVWR is less than 26,001 pounds and you have a passenger endorsement. In addition, a Class C CDL also allows you to operate any vehicle used to move hazardous supplies if the GVWR is less than 26,001 pounds and you have the right endorsement. The endorsement exams are described below. Hazmat supplies are recognized by the Federal Department of Health and Human Services and require a Hazmat placard. Additionally, a driver must obtain a passenger endorsement before acquiring a school bus endorsement. Moveable tanks having a rated capacity under 1,000 gallons are not required to have this endorsement. The air brakes exam is different than the endorsement exams because the air brakes examination works as a restriction instead of an endorsement. <http://adriennemason.com/assets/files/eurosec-cp7-manual.xml>

If you do not pass the air brakes exam, your CDL will bear a mark of restriction which means that you are not licensed to drive a commercial vehicle with air brakes. You may need additional information to meet the legal requirements for starting or operating your business.

The types of vehicles and operations requiring a CDL are outlined below. The Federal Motor Carrier Safety Administration FMCSA has developed and issued standards for State testing and licensing of CDL holders. These standards require States to issue CDLs to certain CMV drivers only after the driver passes knowledge and skills tests administered by the State and related to the type of vehicle the driver expects to operate. Restrictions are placed on a CDL when a driver takes the Skills Test in a vehicle which lacks critical equipment present in particular types of CMVs. Therefore, to avoid restrictions, drivers should take the Skills Test in the same type of vehicle for which they are seeking a CDL to operate. You should carry the old license with your temporary until the new license arrives.

These requirements include attending a Vermont school bus clinic, passing all required tests knowledge, vision, and skill tests, and submitting a medical form. There are no additional requirements. School transportation performed by a state or political subdivision of a state i.e., municipalities are exempt from some CDL requirements. Unsourced material may be challenged and removed. Class B holders are also permitted to operate any commercial motor vehicle included in Class C provided they have the appropriate endorsements. Although all states with the exception to Hawaii permit drivers younger than 21 to apply for a CDL, they may only apply for intrastate commerce which restricts driving to state of residence only. For example, an 18 year old Class A CDL holder who resides in Minnesota is permitted to operate a Commercial Motor Vehicle within anywhere across Minnesota state only. However, until they reach age 21 they may not drive under federal law in Michigan, Wisconsin, South Dakota, North Dakota, or any state where they do not live. This restriction may also apply to drivers age 21 or over that have medical issues that may prevent one from properly being able to leave state residence without having difficulty. Furthermore, a CDL cardholder must be 21 years of age or over in order to transport placarded hazardous material and operate a school bus transporting students under 21 years of age. As of June 2020, this proposal is left abandoned and unlikely to pass in the future. The Federal Highway Administration FHWA has developed testing standards for licensing drivers. U.S. states are able to issue CDLs only after a written and practical test have been given by the State or approved testing facility. States are free to enact endorsements at the state level. For example, in New York State, a W endorsement is required to operate a tow truck. A CDL holder planning to become a School Bus Driver will also need the Passenger Vehicle P endorsement, pass a background check by the Transportation Security Administration, and a sex offender background check. This endorsement requires a road test.

A background check is required by the Transportation Security Administration Per federal regulations, the holder must be 21 years of age or over for this endorsement. A background check is required by the Transportation Security Administration Any other restrictions have been promulgated at the state level. Some states, such as Ohio, for example require 160 hours of classroom and on the road training. Training may be obtained by completing a qualified CDL training program through a DMV approved truck driving school. These training programs specialize in teaching potential truck drivers the necessary skills and knowledge to properly and safely operate a truck, including map reading, trip planning, and compliance with U.S. Department of Transportation laws, as well as backing, turning, hooking a trailer, and road driving. The overall purpose of these training schools is to help truckers to pass the CDL knowledge and skills tests as well as advanced driving techniques such as skid avoidance and recovery and other emergency actions for situations such as a breakaway trailer and hydroplaning. These classes usually go well beyond the training the typical noncommercial driver receives, such as the drivers education provided in high school. There are a number of licensed CDL training schools around the United States and many trucking companies operate their own schools as well. To pass the driving skills test the student driver must successfully perform a set of required driving maneuvers. The driving skill test must be taken in a vehicle that the driver operates or expects to operate. For certain endorsements, such as Air pneumatic Brakes, the driving skills test must be taken in a vehicle equipped with such equipment. You will also need to show you do in fact show the characteristics of an aware and fully operative driver. This does not exclude certain disabilities, however, you must meet standard requirements, required by the safety operators.

The test must be the same as those given by the State issuing the CDL and the instructors must meet the same professional certification as State instructors. A valid medical certificate must be filled out by a medical professional listed on the National Registry of Certified Medical Examiners at the conclusion of an extensive physical exam, with a copy provided to the state Bureau or Department of Motor Vehicles compliance unit. See Physical qualifications for drivers page of the Federal Motor Carrier Safety Administration. States have to use both CDLIS and NDR to check a drivers record before a CDL can be issued. To gain permission to access to the CDLIS and NDR databases one should visit the Federal Motor Carrier Safety Administration FMCSA Technical Support Web site for instructions on how this information is accessed and who can access it. Trucking companies can use a commercial service that has clearance for providing this information as a means of screening prospective employees. Additionally, an operator of a CMV that is found to have any detectable amount of BAC above 0.0% will be put out of service for a minimum of 24 hours. The notification must be made by the end of the next business day following receipt of the notice of the suspension, revocation, cancellation, lost privilege or disqualification. Violation of this requirement may result in civil or criminal penalties. A Class C Licence allows the holder to drive cars, utilities, vans, some light trucks, carbased motor tricycles, tractors and implements such as graders. You can also drive vehicles that seat up to 12 adults, including the driver. It also includes vehicles in class HC. Class 1 governs vehicles with a GLW gross laden weight or GCW gross combined weight of less than 6,000 kg, and Class 6 governs motorcycles. Gaining a Class 5 is not dependent on holding a Class 3. Once a driver has a Class 2 they can progress straight through to Class 4 and Class 5.

Each progression 2 to 3, 2 to 4, or 4 to 5 requires having held an unrestricted licence of the preceding class for at least six months. For drivers aged 25 or over the minimum period for holding the unrestricted time is reduced to three months, or waived entirely on completion of an approved course of instruction. The endorsements are Must be renewed every five years Where the holder also has a heavy vehicle Class 2 or Class 4 licence, they are permitted to drive heavy special vehicles. Otherwise the limits for Class 1 6,000 kilograms 13,000 lb apply. These endorsements are issued for one or five years, at the option of the applicant at the time of purchase. The driving tests for both are the same, but only class 4 private light bus licence can be applied after passing the test. In order to apply for a class 5 public light bus licence, a driver has to take an additional Preservice Training Course for Public Light Bus Drivers before submitting the application The driving tests for both are the same, and class 4 private light bus licence is issued automatically at the same time when applying class 9, 10 licences after passing the test. In addition, class 5 public light bus licence can be applied after taking an additional Preservice Training Course for Public Light Bus Drivers. The driving test requirement is the same with public bus class 10, and is only retained with historical interest. This has been relaxed such that a driver passing test on a franchised public bus can get classes 9, 10 in addition to class 17, and original drivers holding class 17 without classes 9, 10 can also apply them for free without taking tests. Class 2 light goods vehicles licence is issued in addition to class 18 after passing the test. Class 2 light goods vehicles and class 18 medium goods vehicles licences are issued in addition to class 19 after passing the test. The driver has to obtain full licence of class 18 medium goods vehicles at least before applying.

Class 19 heavy goods vehicles licence is issued in addition to class 20 after passing the test. Class 21 licence has to be used in conjunction with a class 2, 18 or 19 licence, allowing the driver to drive special purpose vehicles with maximum gross vehicle weight up to the goods vehicle licence the driver holds.
